This coming Tuesday Lynda will be having her first cataract surgery. As many of you know, Lynda has been having trouble with her eyesight for a few years. She has Fuchs Cornea Dystrophy, which is a cornea eye disease, and she will probably need to have a cornea transplant someday. However, in December her Fuchs specialist decided that she should have her cataracts removed first. There are two possible outcomes: either having her cataracts removed may improve her eyesight enough so that she can postpone her corneal transplants until much later or her corneas will deteriorate quickly and she will need to have them replaced soon. Jim may also need to have eye surgery as well because of his glaucoma. Jim has been using drops in his eyes to keep the pressure down but his eye pressure has been slowly climbing. Jim's optometrist recommends that he has laser surgery to improve the "drainage" of his eyes. Jim has an appointment with a glaucoma specialist on 31 May to see what he recommends. Thank you for your prayers. Lynda's cataract surgeries are on 26 April and 24 May. We will let you know if and when Jim's surgery will be.
